THE AMERICAN MERCURY AUTHORS

HERBERT ASBURY'S first book, "Up From Methodism," was published recently.

BENJAMIN DECASSERES is the author of "The Shadow-Eater," "Forty Immortals," "Mirrors of New York" and other books. He has been translated into French by Rémy de Gourmont. He is now living in New York.

BERNARD DE VOTO is an instructor of English at Northwestern University. His novel, "The Chariot of Fire," has just appeared.

L. M. HUSSEY is a Philadelphia chemist. His first novel, "Odalisque," will appear next month.

ROBINSON JEFFERS' recently published "Roan Stallion, Tamar and Other Poems" has placed him in the front rank of modern American poets. He is living in California.

H. M. KALLEN, PH.D. (Harvard), was a pupil of William James, and has taught philosophy at Harvard, Clark and Wisconsin and at the New School for Social Research. He has published many philosophical works.

HUGH KENT was formerly managing editor of the New York Morning Telegraph.

WILLIAM C. MURPHY, JR., is a Washington newspaper man, now chief of the Senate staff of the United States Daily. He was formerly with the Washington Post and the Washington Bureau of the N. C. W. C. News Service. K. C. MCINTOSH is a commander in the Navy Supply Corps. During the occupation of Haiti he served on board the U. S. S. Tennessee, flagship of Rear Admiral Caperton.

WILLIAM SEAGLE'S article in this issue is part of a book on the antics of the legislative mind, that is soon to be published.

ROSCOE SPENCER is a Virginian and a graduate of the Johns Hopkins Medical School. He is now living in Washington.

RUTH SUCKOW'S "Iowa Interiors," a collection of short stories, has just been published. She is also the author of two novels, "Country People" and "The Odyssey of a Nice Girl."

RAY T. TUCKER was born in Holyoke, Mass., and graduated from Yale in 1915. He is now Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post.

WILLIAM WEIMAR is a native of New York, and for a time attended Columbia. He is now a salesman of abrasive products.

ELEANOR ROWLAND WEMBRIDGE (MRS. HARRY WEMBRIDGE), PH.D. (Radcliffe), is now the woman referee of the Juvenile Court of Cleveland. She is the author of "The Right to Believe," "Other People's Daughters" and other books.

PARKHURST WHITNEY is a former newspaper man now writing for the magazines.
