

you print. In some of the other magazines, however, he has had a tendency to a certain silly sentimentality characterized as sobsister stuff. Adams, a good staff writer.

And now, although I know there is little need of my saying so, I think I speak for a very large percentage of your readers when I say that I would much rather read a good story by an unknown author than a poor story by a Big Name. On the whole, I think you follow this rule; but you frequently fall by the wayside.

As long as ARGOSY continues to be the magazine it now is, it will always have a weekly passenger in GEORGE T. RODE.

A STORY with two important qualities:

Brooklyn, N. Y.

As the best story of 1934, I select Leinster's "The Rollers." It had a free, easy, readable, flowing style, with an intelligent and plausible plot. Mystery is the essence of almost every type of story, together with suspense, which makes the reader feel as if he is helping to unravel the tangled threads. Both these qualities Leinster's story possessed.

S. J. STEVENS.

NEVER all good—or all bad:

New York City.

I submit Karl Detzer's "The Fatal Alarm," the reason being that the story is written by a man who certainly knows his fire department; also his politics, for politics still plays an important part in the fire and police departments of all large and small cities. Newspaper reports almost confirm Detzer's story. Your writers turn out both good and bad stories, but fortunately you never get all the bad ones or all the good ones in the same issue!

J. P. COYNE.

LOOKING AHEAD!

WAR DECLARED!

Do you remember that magnificent serial, "The Kingdom of Hell," which ARGOSY published several years ago?—Here is the sequel to it—an even greater story, carrying on the adventures of John Keats, newspaper reporter, "covering" the present troubled international situation in central Europe. A thrilling seven-part story by

THEODORE ROSCOE

THE SHERLOCK OF SAGELAND

A "Henry" Western story—and "Henry" stands for "hilarity." "You're no good as a sheriff, Henry," they told that ex-ham actor. "You're the laughing stock of Wild Horse Valley."—Yet Henry managed to outwit a city sleuth. A long novelette by

W. C. TUTTLE

NEVER SHOW YOUR HAND

A bitter, hardboiled story of deserting Légionnaires who tasted the terrors of torture at the hands of fanatic desert tribesmen. A tale with an unhappy ending—for readers who can take it. A novelette by

ALFRED HALL STARK

DEAD MAN'S REEF

Inspector Van Tromp, of the Dutch East Indies Police, felt certain that the murderers of his friend would return to the scene of their crime. A novelette by
