1. "Not long ago I made an aerial survey trip from Seattle, over British Columbia, to Juneau, Alaska," writes an aviator. "You may be interested in the story connected with it because it involves Canadian Club.

2. "The camera I use is a 50-pound instrument for making aerial photographs of large areas of land. When we had it installed, I took off. I was to land at Prince Rupert, B. C., to refuel, but I was a hundred miles from there, when the motor began to sputter and die...

3. "I had no choice but to bail out. The wind was so strong it was completely impossible to guide the chute. I couldn't tell where I was going to land. Then I hit ground, and almost knocked down a trapper who had been standing there watching me! He helped me collapse the chute. Then, without a word, he handed me a bottle of Canadian Club. I wish I could tell you how good that warming, friendly flavor seemed after what I'd just been through. That whisky of yours served as a perfect introduction. We're still good friends, the three of us—the trapper, Canadian Club, and I!"
