

Is the Country Purer Than Ivory Soap, or On The Verge of Being Taken Over?

Chairman Walter (Like Wm. Z. Foster) Bullish on Leftism in America

In some ways the Left may find the new report of the House Un-American Activities Committee an encouraging document. It will be heartening, in browsing through it, to learn on page 34, for example, that "Henry Wallace . . . received over ten million votes in the 1948 national election." The figure mistakenly reported hitherto in such publications as the World Almanac was 1,156,103.

The Committee is fond of multiplying things by ten. We would not be surprised to learn after a few more years of its researches that Vincent Hallinan, the Progressive Party candidate in 1952, really received 1,326,080 votes and not the 132,608 with which he has been credited.

The Committee does not limit itself to mechanical multiplication. It is creative. Like the FBI, it multiplies the number of Communist party members by ten, to reach a grand total of 200,000 subversives. But it does not rest content with this arithmetic.

It would be dangerous to do so. Some readers might take out their paper and pencil, and make this kind of a computa-

Another of Walter's Discoveries

"The evidence adduced at the hearings established that there is not, and never has been, in the entertainment industry any practice of depriving people of employment because of 'political affiliations or beliefs,' but that a number of people who have been identified as Communists or active on behalf of Communism have been refused access to mass mediums of communications."

tion. They might take the population of the U.S. roughly as 160,000,000.

One percent of 160,000,000 is 1,600,000. Half of that, or half of one percent, is 800,000. Half of that, or one quarter of one percent, is 400,000. Half of that, or one-eighth of one percent, is 200,000.

According to that computation, only one-eighth of one percent of the people of the United States are subversive even by the standards of Congressman Walter and J. Edgar Hoover. If only one-eighth of one percent are subversive, then 99 and 88/100th percent are pure. This is better than Ivory Soap, which only claims to be 99 and 44/100th percent pure. How pure can a country get?

Chairman Walter approaches the problem differently.

Without Jury Trial or Counsel!

The House Committee on Un-American Activities Committee in its 1957 annual report discloses that at an executive session last June 2, it heard two witnesses, Joseph Schoemehl and the Rev. Obadiah Jones, "both of whom served as informants for the FBI within the Communist party."

The Committee charges (P. 45) that when Schoemehl was called before a Party Review Commission in 1950 on suspicion of being an FBI plant, his trial "was cloaked in secrecy, and the defendant was not given benefit of counsel, nor was there a jury."

We hope the American Civil Liberties Union will investigate. On due process grounds alone Mr. Schoemehl seems entitled to reinstatement with back pay.

In his preface to the annual report, Chairman Walter admits "Numerically, the membership of the Communist Party has declined considerably during the past few years. . . ." But, he continues, "Anyone who thinks that Communism in the United States no longer constitutes a serious menace should consider that at this moment on American soil are the equivalent of 20 combat divisions of enemy troops engaged in propaganda, espionage, subversion, and loyal only to the Soviet Union."

When startled reporters went to the Committee's offices for more light on this horrifying revelation, they were told that this was based on the Pentagon's own official figures and that in fact this army of subversives "far outnumbered" the American troops on home duty.

This led to an interesting statistical hassle at the Pentagon. The Pentagon admitted that the nine divisions on duty in the U.S. and its possessions comprised about 158,000 troops, but insisted that with supplemental forces it could muster 350,000.

For aficionados of the Committee, however, the admission will be enough. As Chairman Walter paints the picture, there are "20 combat divisions" of subversives in this country as against only nine Army divisions. Even the Pentagon admits that the total number of troops it claims in its nine divisions are 42,000 less than the number in Chairman Walter's divisions.

From this we can only conclude that any moonless night, on signal, the U.S. Army might be overpowered and we might all wake up next morning nationalized. Thus, by Chairman Walter's gifted computations, using the same figures, the country instead of being 99 and 88/100 percent pure is so menaced by disloyalty that it is on the verge of being taken over, its armed forces outnumbered by the enemy.

Who's Infiltrating Whom?

We had assumed from past reports that Communists were anxious to infiltrate the government. But a revelation in the 1957 report of the House Un-American Activities Committee leaves us confused. The report devotes considerable space to the testimony in Denver last year of Bellarmino Duran, whom it describes as "one of the many patriotic Americans who have devoted years of their lives as undercover agents for the F. B. I."

A subject on which Mr. Duran gave the Committee the benefit of his inside knowledge was the security system set up by the Communists to avoid detection and infiltration. One of the methods used (p. 38) by the Party in what Mr.

Duran called its "obsession with secrecy" was to check carefully whether any of its members "had relatives in the Federal government or local government or newspapers or radio." Apparently the Communists with whom Mr. Duran dealt were as suspicious of members with relatives in the government, as the government has been of employees with relatives in the Communist party. It seems to be getting harder all the time to plant such people in the party.

Can it be that some day a young man will have a better chance to get a government job if he can show that grandpa is an old-time member of the CP, in a position to slip him a little inside stuff now and then?

A Report on The House Un-American Activities Committee's 1957 ReportNothing Like It Since Cotton Mather Exposed Satan's Wives in Salem

"It cost the Court a wonderful deal of Trouble, to hear the Testimonies of the Sufferers; for when they were going to give in their Depositions, they would for a long time be taken with fits, that made them incapable of saying any thing. The Chief Judge asked the prisoner, who he thought hindered these witnesses from giving their testimonies? and he answered, He supposed it was the Devil. That Honourable person then reply'd, How comes the Devil so loathe to have any Testimony born against you? Which cast him into very great confusion."

All that we have discussed on page two would be funny if the Committee did not take it all so seriously. Any psychiatrist who reads this report will see that it is not the product of cynical minds but of people who are on the verge of hysteria. Chairman Walter ends his preface by saying apocalyptically, "It is but a brief interval that still remains for us to elect sur-

Verdict First, Trial Later

Last June 7 in a public statement announcing hearings of the Fund for the Republic, Chairman Walter asked with finely balanced impartiality, "Is this foundation . . . a friend or a foe in our Nation's death struggle against the Communist conspiracy?" In his preface to the 1957 report, Walter accuses the Fund of giving "great aid and comfort to the Communist apparatus." The report itself quotes with approval testimony by representatives of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars calling the Fund a "fraud" and a "tool." But for those who wonder like Elmo Roper, head of the Fund, when it will be allowed to present its side of the story, the report says "Staff investigations have not yet been completed, and the general public hearings on the Fund for the Republic have not as yet been scheduled." We wonder how many more times the Committee will find the Fund guilty before venturing to give it a hearing.

vival—or extinction." The report itself ends by saying that "unless we meet the total challenge of Communist unconventional war, we shall assuredly condemn ourselves to the Arctic hell of Siberian slave labor camps." Men who can write this way at a moment when Russia and the Communist movement have never been so discredited, when the satellite system is beginning to break up, and when the American Communists are a hunted and divided handful, are as sick as the men who made Salem a synonym for witch mania three centuries ago.

There is hardly a page which does not have some trace of neuroticism. Here we find the Committee quoting with approval testimony that Gomulka is dedicated to the complete Sovietization of Poland. There we have Chairman Walter saying that Communism's "methodology has become more cunning" and find that all these big words refer to is nothing more novel than the filing of a brief amicus curiae in the Supreme Court. There are plots everywhere: "a mammoth nationwide campaign . . . to paralyze the security programs", "an organized effort . . . to disrupt and break down" passport regulations. The Committee has no trouble in finding witnesses who have seen with their own eyes old ladies flying over the church steeple on a broom, like the FBI informant who told of being driven around in St. Louis by a strange man from New York with a Daily Worker press card who "operated under the name of Whirlwind Larson." (Could it have been Superman?). This informant boasted how with a few explosives in the local light company, "I could blow it, blow it up out of the ground and keep it blown up." Whee!

The Un-American Activities Committee some day will have a final resting place in the annals of political psychiatry. But in the meantime its sloppy, unfair, and inaccurate compilations are taken seriously in the courts and solemnly consulted by community groups. To oppose its recommendations is to help the Reds, and to help the Reds is to put oneself beyond the pale. Its recommendations once they get through to the House floor are practically unbeatable. Here we have a whole set of new ones: to authorize wiretaps and other technical means of surveillance (all's fair against the wives of Satan), to restrict the right of travel (Walter is a one-man Iron Curtain, as head of the Immigration subcommittee he works to keep 'em out and as head of the Un-American committee he works to keep 'em in; he's a menace to the travel business), and to lengthen the statute of limitations and increase the penalties for all kinds of political misdeeds, especially those witches and warlocks are prone to commit. We will report more fully later on the Committee's bills but suggest that in the meantime there is no better way to educate your neighbors on just how wacky this committee is than by circulating its own report.

Travel Restrictions Asked Even on Americans "Neither Communist nor Subversive"

"Glaring instances have come to the attention of the Committee of certain foreign travel by nationals of this country, neither Communist nor subversive, at times, in areas, and under circumstances rendering such foreign travel against the best interests of this country. In the opinion of the Committee, serious consideration should be given to the extension of legislation governing the issuance of passports coming within this category."
