

CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS NUMBER.

RHYS CARPENTER

was born at Cotuit, Cape Cod, Massachusetts, August 5th, 1889. He received the degree of A.B. from Columbia University in 1909. In 1908 he was appointed Rhodes Scholar from New York State, and since October of that year has been in residence at Balliol College, Oxford.

WOODROW WILSON,

President of Princeton University, is a native of the Old Dominion. After graduating at Princeton in 1879, he studied law in the University of Virginia and took a post-graduate course in Johns Hopkins University. For a short time he practised law in Atlanta, Georgia. He was professor of History and Political Economy in Bryn Mawr College from 1885 to 1888 and in Wesleyan University from 1888 to 1890. In the last-named year he was appointed to the chair of Jurisprudence and Politics in Princeton University, and on August 1st, 1902, he assumed his present position as head of that institution on the resignation of the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton. Among his published works are "A History of the American People" and "Congressional Government: A Study in American Politics." He has from time to time contributed articles to the REVIEW.

PHILIP LORING ALLEN

was a native of Wisconsin and a graduate of the university of that State. He was an editorial writer on the New York

"Evening Post," for which paper he also served as Washington correspondent. He contributed both fiction and political articles to a number of periodicals and published a book entitled "America's Awakening." His present contribution is published posthumously.

ALGERNON C. SWINBURNE

was born in Pimlico, 1837, and died in Surrey, 1909. Although a student at Oxford University, he left without taking his degree, but was distinguished throughout his life for his mastery of the Greek and Latin languages. As author his many learned essays, written in a vivid style, gave him a place among the prose masters. As poet his "unrivalled rythmical genius," it was hoped, would win him the laureateship. His familiar works are "Atalanta in Calydon," "Songs of the Springtides," "Astrophel and Other Poems," "Mary Stuart."

HERBERT CROLY

was born in New York City in January, 1869. Sometime a student at the College of the City of New York, he later was at Harvard University. From 1900 to 1906 he was editor of the "Architectural Record." His book entitled "Promise of American Life" was published in 1909.

MAJOR-GENERAL W. H. CARTER, U.S.A.,

was born in Nashville, Tennessee. For twenty-four years after graduating at the United States Military Academy he was in active service on the frontier. His first experience was with the Eighth Infantry, which he joined, as second lieutenant, in 1873. In 1874 he was transferred to the Sixth Cavalry, and in 1879 he was promoted to be first lieutenant and regimental quartermaster. He was advanced to the command of a company in the Sixth Cavalry in 1889, and he received his majority in 1897, when he was appointed Assistant Adjutant-General of the United States Army. He served for some time in the Philippines, and he is now in command of the Department of Luzon, Manila. General Carter holds a medal of honor which was awarded to him for distinguished bravery in action against the Apache Indians at Cibicu Creek, Arizona, on the 30th of August, 1881. He is the author of "Horses, Saddles and Bridles," "An Historical Sketch of the Sixth United States Cavalry," "From Yorktown to Santiago" and "Old Army Sketches." He has also contributed to the REVIEW.

JOSEPH J. FEELY

was born in Boston in 1862 and is a graduate of the Boston University Law School, 1884, and at present is president of the alumni of that school. He has been Assistant District Attorney of Massachusetts, and is an authority in the law relative to industrial disputes. He is recognized as a well-known trial lawyer in his State, and also lectures upon legal subjects.

ALEXANDER C. HUMPHREYS

is a native of Edinburgh, Scotland. A graduate of Stevens Institute of Technology in 1881, he returned to it as president in 1902, which distinguished office he now holds. He is a member of many scientific associations, such as American Society of Civil Engineers, American Institute of Mechanical Engineers, British Association for the Advancement of Science, American Chemical Society, and so forth. He has written numerous papers on engineering subjects, and is also the author of "Lecture Notes on Some of the Business Features of Engineering Practices."

is a writer of book reviews and short stories. She was Associated Press correspondent stationed in the island of Jamaica at the time of the outbreak of the insurrection in Cuba. She has been interested in different phases of science for some time and has made a study of laboratory work in various institutions.

LEMUEL E. QUIGG,

the well-known ex-Congressman, was born in Maryland in 1863. Educated in the common schools, he began his career in journalism. From 1883-4 he was editor of the "Flushing Times." For ten years he was on the editorial staff of the "New York Tribune." From 1893-9 he was member of Congress. He served as President of the Republican County Committee of New York State from 1896-1900. Twice acted as chairman of the Republican State Convention, and has three times been a delegate to the Republican National Conventions. His experiences enable him to be a first-hand authority on the personnel and details of party politics.

SYDNEY BROOKS

is an English journalist who has already contributed a number of articles to the REVIEW on a variety of subjects. He is a profound student of current English politics and a reliable writer on that subject.
