Simply to mark in cold and stately marble the unresponsive sod is not enough. The memory of his supreme sacrifice should be a heritage for the ages. It is more fitting, more consoling, far, to give his spirit and soul enduring memorial where congregate those he regretted so to leave.

What place among the haunts of men more fitting to erect such a memorial to the departed than within the sacred walls of the House of God where spirit speaks to spirit in many an expressive and symbolic form, and where the ideals and sacrifices of the dead live on to inspire and quicken the living.

You owe his memory such a memorial in his or your own favorite church. It is never "too late" for such a tribute. Perhaps but a simple hymn-board, or, on the other hand, a chancel and altar complete, a console for the organ, the pews, a communion table, or a baptismal font.

RADIO'S MAGIC WAND

RADIO is swiftly revolutionizing the thought, expression, and habits of the world. The transformation is taking place with dramatic celerity. Already it seems probable that this new resource of civilization will affect the lives of the people more intimately and change the currents of human activity more radically than the introduction of the locomotive, the harnessing of electricity, the telephone, automobile, or the moving picture.

Radio, like other discoveries, is creating new industries, new fields of employment. It is opening up new avenues of education and entertainment, of public information, health protection, and life saving. Its early sensational service was in saving life and property at sea. Its present great opportunity is to give to remote and isolated communities the educational and recreation facilities which hitherto have drawn youth away from the land to the crowded cities.

Already radio, through quick action by representatives of the Government and patriotic response by American industry, has been retained for the leadership of the United States in the field of international communications.

The General Electric Company, whose development work has done so much to make practical the theories, experiments, and original patents of Marconi, was induced by the request of representatives of the Navy Department to enter the field itself instead of selling apparatus to foreign interests already entrenched in America. It was in response to the suggestions of the Government that the Radio Corporation of America was formed to take over the assets and patents of the American Marconi Company, making it a purely American company; and the position of America is now safe and vigorous in the field of international radio communications.

While from a National standpoint this is still the most important achievement in radio, the broadcasting of news, entertainment, and official information unquestionably is responsible for the popular interest in radio which is now sweeping the country.

Nearly all the public, especially that part of it located near the broadcasting stations, is familiar with the results of radio—the concerts and lectures and information that constitute the daily programme that goes out from the broadcasting stations and into the radio telephone receiver sets now found in so many homes. Dealers have studied the business side, expert amateurs the sending and receiving side, the entire public the popular side, but very few are familiar with the interesting inside—the very heart of radio reception and transmitting—known technically as the vacuum tubes, which act as transmitters, detectors, and amplifiers. These constitute the magic wand of radio.

These are not only the scientific heart of radio, but the very source of the development and still the limiting factor in the production expansion programme. The explanation of what they are, whence they came, and how they are made cannot fail to be helpful, not merely to one group, but to the public generally.

The vacuum tube is a veritable Aladdin's lamp of radio. To it we owe the marvelous development of radio communication and, above all, the growth of broadcasting. Its history, like that of most great inventions, is a history of an accidental discovery and of a groping for the explanation of that discovery over a period of twenty years.

We must go back to 1883 for the beginnings of the vacuum tube—back to the days when Edison with dramatic suddenness displayed his carbon filament lamp. For it was Edison who first discovered the phenomenon which is now practically applied in the vacuum tube. In that eventful year, 1883, the idea of performing a curious experiment flashed upon Edison. He mounted a plate within the bulb of his exhausted carbon lamp and connected the plate with a current-indicating instrument—a galvanometer. He turned on the current to the filament. It glowed, as filaments always glow in such circumstances. He looked at the galvanometer. The indicating needle had swung aside. A current was streaming over from the glowing filament to the plate. And yet there was no physical contact of plate with filament! Edison could never make the current flow from the plate to the filament. It would only stream from the glowing thread to the plate.

Sir William Preece, a famous English physicist, called this phenomenon the "Edison effect." But what the Edison effect was neither he nor Edison could explain. Indeed, it was a mystery for over twenty years. The Edison effect proved so baffling simply because scientists did not know enough about electricity to clarify it. Not until radium and the X-rays were discovered, not until the very nature of electricity and of matter was understood, was it possible to explain exactly why the current streamed over from the hot glowing filament to the cold plate, and never in the opposite direction. Then came the research of Sir J. J. Thomson. His conclusions were startling. Electricity is a matter of flowing "electrons"—infinitesimal bits of negative electricity. The electrons are always negative. They manifest themselves only when a body is in an abnormal condition—when, for example, it has too few or too many electrons, and never when it has just enough. They seek to find their own equilibrium, these electrons. They dart from bodies which have too many to bodies which have too few. Every hot metal, every burning thing, discharges them by the billion. From the glowing filament of a carbon lamp they stream out in every direction. When Edison mounted his plate within a lamp bulb and charged it positively, he gave the electrons a definite direction; he made them move from the hot filament to the cold plate. Every boy knows that the north pole of a magnet attracts the south pole of another magnet. The north poles repel each other; so do the south poles. The electrons streamed over from the negative filament to the positive plate by a somewhat similar process. When the plate was negatively charged, the electrons, which are always negative, were repelled. The plate had electrons enough; it wanted no more. It occurred to Professor J. A. Fleming, who was Marconi's chief engineer and who had much to do with explaining the Edison effect in terms of electrons, that a lamp which included a plate might serve a useful purpose in radio communication. We deal with alternating currents in radio, and by alternating currents we mean streams that flow, not in one direction, as water flows through a pipe, but in two directions. In other words, an alternating current flashes back and forth. In radio these oscillations occur with amazing frequency. Between two successive alternations of electricity or waves may be an interval of only half a millionth or a millionth of a second. Fleming was seeking a detector which would respond to these high frequencies better than existing devices. A telephone would answer admirably as a receiver. Unfortunately, the telephone would not respond to alternations so rapid with audible sounds. It occurred to Fleming that the Edison effect could be applied in such a way that the telephone would become a receiver of radio signals.

Remember that the electrons stream only from the hot filament to the plate. Fleming saw that if a bulb containing a plate formed part of the apparatus which received the electric waves hurled into the ether by the transmitting station it would suppress one-half the alternations. The electrons could flow only from the filament to the plate. When an alternation came in the opposite direction, the bulb simply would not respond; that alternation was simply choked off. Hence the bulb converted the alternations into spurts of electricity, all traveling in the same direction, and these were so far reduced in number that they could be heard in a telephone receiver as a musical note. The dots and dashes of the Morse code were therefore heard as short and long notes.

The action of the bulb was much like that of a valve which permits water in a pipe to flow free in one direction, but which promptly closes when the water tries to flow in the opposite direction. Hence, Fleming called the invention, as he applied it, an "oscillation valve." This oscillation valve of Fleming's soon displaced all other detectors of electric waves.

Then came the wonderful improvement invented by Lee De Forest. He conceived the idea of controlling the electrons that streamed over from the filament to the plate. His means of control was simply a wire grid mounted between the filament and the plate, a grid which formed part of an electric circuit. When the grid was electrified negatively just a little, the electrons were correspondingly impeded in their onward rush toward the plate. On the other hand, when the grid was positively electrified to a greater or lesser degree, the electrons were assisted in their effort to reach the plate; indeed, they were literally pulled over. The grid might thus be negatively or positively charged millions of times in a second, but the electrons responded instantly.

Here was a marvelously sensitive method of control. The "three-electrode valve," as it came to be technically called, or the "vacuum tube" in popular parlance, proved to be an extraordinarily sensitive detector of electric waves. More than that, it proved to be also a means of amplifying exceedingly feeble signals. Tube could be added to tube, it was found, so that the signal detected by one could be magnified by a second, that of the second by a third, and so on, until at last an effect was obtained which might well be billions of times more powerful than that originally de-

Accountants' Reports

By WILLIAM H. BELL, M.C.S., C.P.A.

Member of the firm of Haskins and Sells,
New York, Certified Public Accountants.

IN this comprehensive work, Mr. Bell offers accountants, professional and private, authoritative information on the handling of the form, arrangement, and content of reports.

The author explains the importance of uniform practice in rendering reports as a means of insuring their clarity. Fifty statements reproduced in facsimile illustrate the application of the principles brought out in the text.

A Suggestion of the Contents

There are fifteen illustrations of balance sheets, other than consolidated statements. These are designed to solve the problems regarding forms which are commonly encountered in actual practice, directly or by close analogy. Sixteen profit and loss accounts follow. Methods of presenting operating facts, and the use of comparisons, percentages, and supporting schedules are clearly shown.

Four consolidated balance sheets, and three consolidated income statements are reproduced. The twelve remaining statements cover topics such as investment securities, depreciation, cash statements, journalization, and sales cost.

Published 1921. (3rd ed., 1921), 247 pages
(8 1/2 x 11"), flexible binding, price $6.00.

We will be glad to send both of these books, or either one of them, to you postpaid for five days' examination. Within that time of their receipt, you may remit the price as stated or return the books to us. Use the coupon below.

Mathematics of Accounting and Finance

By SEYMOUR WALTON, C.P.A.

Formerly Dean, Walton School of Commerce and H. A. FINNEY, Ph.B., C.P.A.
Professor of Accounting, Northwestern University

THIS work presents in a single volume an exceptionally clear explanation of all mathematics required in accounting and financial work.

It covers the principles thoroughly by completely worked out examples, and illustrates their application to everyday business problems.

Gives Methods of Practical Value

The first two chapters give methods of quick calculation. The authors then deal with the principles of arithmetic progressions, averages, and percentages, pointing out their value in handling accounting problems. The seven chapters following are devoted to the application of principles given in the first part to specific business situations.

The calculation of trade discounts, the keeping of partnership books, methods of computing goodwill, and the conversion of foreign exchange are all worked out. The use and value of logarithms in calculating interest, bond values, leaseholds, and depreciation are shown.

Published 1921, (3rd ed., 1922), 274 pages, cloth binding, price $4.00.

MOUNTING THE PLATE ON THE SUPPORTING LEADS OVER THE GRID AND FILAMENT

tected. If a dying fly groans, its anguish would be expressed in a terrific wail. The tap of a lead pencil becomes the blow of a trip-hammer.

It is because a vacuum tube can thus detect and amplify extremely feeble currents that broadcasting has grown overnight into a means of communication the possibilities of which seem almost limitless. Radio, a phase of engineering so technical, so special in character that it interested only the electrically informed enthusiasts, has become the common property of millions who now listen to the news of the day, to opera, to the jokes of some famous music-hall comedian, to the sermons of a noted preacher, broadcasted through the ether of space in rippling electric waves which pass through brick walls and mountains as light passes through glass.

Even to radio engineers it still seems almost miraculous that an electric lamp, like that which shines upon many a desk, has but to be provided with a plate (curled in the form of a sheath-like cylinder) and a grid to produce effects of extraordinary magnitude.

Although the price of tubes, so essential in the reception of broadcasted entertainment, has been much reduced, experienced production engineers are bending every effort to devising methods of manufacture which are cheaper and more rapid. Although machines play a part in the major processes of manufacture, tubes are still largely made by hand. Indeed, the personal equation plays a far more important part in the making of vacuum tubes than of any other piece of electrical apparatus with which the public is familiar.

Merely the preparing and assembling of the filament and grid before they are mounted in the bulb involves fourteen distinct operations, and each of these fourteen operations in turn involves much skillful adjusting, bending, twisting, and joining. It is a comparatively easy matter to seal the leading-in wires of an ordinary lamp so that there shall be no air leakage; but the sealing-in of the leading-in wires of a vacuum tube is a far more complicated process. The sealing methods employed in lamp-is the last word in SHIELDED radio receiving apparatus. The ELMCO Tuner, Type S-1, and Detector, Two Stage Amplifier, Type A-3 is the development of Elmco engineers after years of study to secure the highest receiving efficiency.

Showing Complete Receiving Set Elmco Senior Tuner Type S-1, with Elmco Detector and Two Stage Amplifier, Type A-3

Price, Without Tubes, Phones or Batteries, $100

The Elmco Tuner, Type S-1, is guaranteed to be free from body capacity in any degree. The circuits are inductively coupled and symmetrically designed, so that maximum efficiency is obtained when tuned to any specific wave length within the range of the set. The adjusting dials are so arranged that after each operation the tuning may be sharpened to a very fine degree. The design of the Tuner is such that one of the controlling knobs acts as a vernier adjustment to the others; this feature allows for a nicety of control, which permits the operator to clarify telephone speech with maximum ease. The Elmco cabinet is of solid mahogany, beautifully finished, and the proportions of the sets make them extremely attractive.

THE ELMCO Crystal Detector Set

Elmco Crystal Detector Set, complete with head phones, price $28.00 is highly selective. Extra-sensitive crystal and head phones are furnished and the cabinet is of highly finished solid mahogany. The range of the Elmco Crystal Detector Set is between 20 and 25 miles. All ELMCO apparatus is guaranteed to be perfect in material, workmanship and performance. We are also in position to make quick shipments on all parts, such as condensers, vacuum tube sockets and Rheostats.

making are not adequate in this process; the precautions taken to prevent the leakage of air into the tube must be more refined. Again, the preparation of the leading-in wires themselves is an operation that must be most delicate and precise. They are die-cut by hand, and some of them must be bent with the utmost care.

Equally difficult is the fashioning of the filament which, when it glows, shoots out electrons. The filament is a tungsten wire as fine as a human hair. Variations in diameter of even a few ten-thousandths of an inch cannot be permitted. The filaments must be exactly uniform in size and shape. The mere matter of cutting the filaments to the proper length is important. If the filament is five per cent short, for instance, the life of the tube may be reduced by one-half.

The grid must be wound around its support and welded into place. Because this is a machine operation it will be assumed at once that it is easy. It is anything but that. Uniformity of shape is essential. The operator of the welding machine must have acquired the knack of applying uniform pressure, because this is essential in securing a perfect weld. It sometimes takes two weeks or more to adjust the welder properly. It is the function of the welder to heat, and the heat is electrically obtained. Too much current will melt the wires of the grid; too little will not produce a good weld. Only long experience can dictate just what the amount of current should be.

Next comes the formation of the plate, so called—in reality, a cylinder surrounding the grid and filament. It is punched from sheets of nickel or molybdenum. Like the grid, it must be welded to its supports, an operation which, as we have seen, is almost a fine art.

The last operation, which consists in "anchoring" the filament in place, is one of the finer points of the process. It involves much calculation and thought; for the filament must be held firmly in place and yet it must have sufficient play to allow for its expansion when heated.

When the elements of the vacuum tube (the filament, the grid, and the plate) are assembled and then mounted in the bulb, the process of exhaustion must be carried out. The more air removed from the bulb, the more efficient the tube; for we have seen how easy it is for an atom of air to block electrons rushing from the filament toward the plate. The tube is exhausted by a pump which was developed in the research laboratories of the General Electric Company, and which is the most perfect instrument of the type yet invented.

Quantity production of tubes by machine must ultimately come in order that the insistent demand of the public may be satisfied. But quantity production in the automobile sense is at present impossible, simply because vacuum tubes, like fine chronometers, are still made by hand.

Warning:

This is the last appearance of this offer. It is your only opportunity.

This Offer Expires July 1st

To all who have been planning to buy a typewriter, we make this special announcement—up to July 1st you can save $45 on the famous $100 Oliver, the price being $55. After July 1st the price will be $65. Prompt action saves you the extra $10.

Total Saving, $45

This offer is made by the Oliver Typewriter Company itself. You get a brand new Standard Oliver, Model Nine, direct from the factory, not second-hand, not rebuilt. It is the identical Oliver long priced at $100. Over 950,000 have been sold to satisfied users the world over.

SEND NO MONEY

Just mail the coupon and we send you an Oliver for Five Days' Free Trial. If you want to buy it, pay $3 after trial, then $4 per month. If you don't want it, ship it back at our expense. By dealing direct with the factory you save the usual selling cost. Sending the coupon does not obligate you to buy. We leave the decision to you, after the Oliver arrives.

Mail the Coupon NOW

Note that the coupon is valid only until midnight, June 30th. After that the price will be $65. So act quickly. Mail the coupon now and get the Free Trial Oliver. You do not assume the slightest risk. The Oliver must sell itself.

SUPPOSE IT WERE YOUR BOY—

A REQUEST THAT READERS OF THE OUTLOOK JOIN IN THIS PATRIOTIC AND HELPFUL SERVICE

WHEN the sailor lads of America pour out from the great warships upon the bewildering streets of the city of New York, how shall they be met? Where shall they go? If one of them were your son, would you not cry out passionately—"Place him under the influence of good people and a good home?"

WHAT THE BOYS NEED

What to do with the enlisted men of the Navy on shore leave is a serious question. Without some objective of the nature of home or club they are likely to drift into mischief or worse. These boys crave decent surroundings and pleasures. They need to be assured of some sort of a place with good clean beds, baths, music, and diversions of the kind that are wholesome and attractive. The lack of a "home base" gives them a "lonesome feeling" and that is why you frequently find them haunting the street corners and seeking distraction with questionable companions in questionable resorts.

IT IS PRECISELY THIS HOME BASE WHICH THE NATIONAL NAVY CLUB SUPPLIES

The National Navy Club of New York, situated at 15 East 41st Street, has a three-fold mission. It acts for the enlisted Navy or Marine man on shore leave as:

A home where he is not only made to feel at home, but where every influence urges him to behave as if he were in his own home.

A hotel which does not cold-shoulder the sailor boy because he is a sailor boy; which is fully equipped with every adjunct to comfort; where the rates are nominal, neither beyond his reach nor on the other hand suggestive of charity.

A home club in the best and most constructive sense.

SOME FIGURES THAT SHED LIGHT ON THE NAVY CLUB'S ACTIVITIES

Foreign navies utilizing the club.....	19
Number of states represented.....	49
Average daily canteen attendance.....	250
Average number of men securing sleeping quarters.....	120
Present sleeping capacity.....	140
Average number of wounded soldiers entertained per month	750

The club has operated continuously since July, 1917, and during the year 1921, 25,000 were furnished sleeping accommodations and 30,000 meals were served in the club canteen.

The club's physical equipment consists of reading, writing and lounge room, library, billiard room, mail and check room, bedrooms and dormitories.

The canteen, directed by a volunteer committee of ladies, serves the best of home-cooked food at cost.

One of the most important departments of the Club is its mail and check room, open day and night, where thousands of letters are received and held or forwarded on request.

ADMIRAL PLUNKETT WRITES—

Rear Admiral Plunkett of the Naval War College writes: "On the ship, we are one family; officers and men, if the ship goes down we go down together. When our men get liberty ashore, we have to trust you people of New York to see to it that there shall be a clean, decent place for the men to go."

This is not a work for a few—each citizen has a responsibility to see that these boys have a home on shore to go to. We realized the necessity during the war. It is greater now because all other clubs are closed.

FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED FOR CONTINUING THIS WORK

Although the Club is not a charity, it is manifestly not self-supporting. At the rates charged, the members and lodgers pay less than one-third of the maintenance budget. The balance must be raised through corporate membership dues. Every enlisted man in the American Navy comes into the port of New York during his term of service. The Navy Club is therefore a national institution.

Will you join us in this patriotic and forward-looking service? Your subscription on the appended blank will be a vote for decency and clean American manhood.

BY THE WAY

THE fashion of anonymity in book-making seems to have had its day. The earliest printers not only left out their names but even omitted to date their books, and one of the most famous of novelists, Sir Walter Scott, it will be remembered, carefully concealed his identity for years after his first novel became famous. But the pendulum now swings the other way, in the spirit of the saying, "Credit to whom credit is due," and an American publisher, Alfred A. Knopf, is completing the reaction by printing not only his own and the author's name on his books, but also those of the printer, the binder, and the paper-maker. A general adoption of this sensible practice would lead not only to good feeling on the part of these collaborators in book-making, but to their emulation in making a product worthy of bearing a personal credit.

Much of the fine work issued by American publishers—and fine work is being done by them in spite of a general falling off in the quality of paper and presswork as a result of the war—has been due to men who have endeavored to put individuality into American typography—men such as D. B. Updike of the Merrymount Press, William Dana Orcutt of the Plimpton Press, Bruce Rogers of the Riverside Press, and the Goudys of Forest Hill, Long Island. To these names might be added those of such thoroughly workmanlike printers as De Vinne of New York and Munder of Baltimore. With the readjustment of industrial conditions anticipated in the long period of peace that seems before us, book-making will no doubt become a finer art than ever.

A request made to a travel bureau for information about the Czechoslovak Republic brought to our desk, together with other pamphlets, a copy of the Czechoslovak Constitution, printed in English in the city of Prague. Some of the paragraphs are novel and interesting. For instance:

Privileges due to sex, birth, or occupation shall not be recognized.

Inviolability of matter intrusted to the mails is guaranteed.

Public instruction shall be given so as not to be in conflict with the results of scientific investigation.

Wedlock, family, and motherhood shall be under the special protection of the law.

Only such titles may be conferred as designate official rank or a profession.

Every manner whatsoever of forcible denationalization is prohibited.

The second paragraph and the last were probably inspired by the autocratic methods of the former Austrian régime.

"Prince Wixizwyxard, of the house of Challougriczilczise of Ethiopia," the "Battle Creek Idea" says in a paragraph which one fancies is going to be humorous but which turns out to be deadly serious, "is visiting here and made the
