What Did Washington Not Do ?

THIS being Washington's Birthday, I have been reading "The University of Washington and Lee," an article by George Marvin in the February 16 issue of The Outlook. In mentioning the various colleges and universities that bear the name of Washington, the following statement is made: "The college at Lexington is the only one that the first President directly sponsored and knowingly endowed with his name."

There is a little college of ancient traditions and local pride tucked down in the pleasant old town of Chestertown, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, that would challenge the accuracy of the above statement. To quote from the "National Geographic Magazine" of February, 1927: "The last, founded in 1782, was the first college to bear the name of Washington, who made a substantial contribution to the endowment fund, became one of the board of governors, and in 1789 received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the institution." H. O. STEPHENS.
Pittsfield, Massachusetts.

Advice

OUR old-time readers, generally, must have had, as I had, the surprise of their lives when double evidence was presented that The Outlook was disposed to compete with "Life" and "Judge." I refer to the articles "Edward and the Scriptures" (issue of February 23) and "Released for Publication" (issue of March 2).

The former was excruciatingly funny, without aiming to be such; and the latter just the opposite—even to the leaving of the superior ego (the "I killed Cock Robin") to the imagination.

With so great a record of worth-while expositions of men and things (and who may say that President Butler is ever ridiculous or that the average mother can be depended upon to fully appreciate a son's view-point?), it seems passing strange that these ebullitions got by the censor.

Take the advice of a possibly unwise old man: Don't do it again.

H. B. YOUNG.

Burlington, Iowa.

Contributors' Gallery

THIS is the second article which The Outlook has published by "Culprit 49,068." It may be recalled that at the time we printed his former article we mentioned the fact that he was a prisoner at the Ohio State Penitentiary, occupying the same cell once occupied by another contributor to The Outlook—O. Henry.

THE article on "A Nation of Wongs" comes to us from Germantown Academy, Germantown, Pennsylvania.

GEORGE MARVIN's article on Ottawa is the last of a series of studies of American cities which he made while on a trip about the continent for The Outlook.
