By the Way

A YOUNG doctor in South Carolina was called to see a patient who lived miles into the backwoods. "Have you given him anything to relieve him?" he asked.

"Well, no, doc—that is to say, nothin' to speak of," replied the patient's wife. "I had him soak his feet in almost b'ilin' water with a lot of mustard in it, and I put a red-hot plaster on his back and another one on his chest, and I've put a couple of blisters I had in the house under his arms, and a bag of cracked ice to the back of his neck, and had him drink a pint of ginger tea with a dash of rum in it, jes' as hot as he could swaller it, and I foltered that with some yard bitters one of the neighbors sent over, and I had him take five or six pills out of a box I got one day of a man that came along with medicine to sell, and he's had three or four spoons of Quackem's pain-killer, and one of those sedelitz powders, but I didn't think I ort to give him much of anything, or to try to do much for him until you come and see what you think ailed him. Then I reckoned we could go at him and really give him something and do something for him."

From "Life:—

"Great Cæsar's ghost!" shouted the editor of the tabloid newspaper. "I can't make head or tail out of this despatch from our special correspondent in South America."

"Neither could I," said his assistant.

"Jimmie," called the editor to the office boy, "ask the South American correspondent to step in here a minute."

Abe Martin wisely remarks: "O' all th' substitutes, a substitute speaker is the worst."

Customer: "Oh, dear, no! I simply could not walk a step in shoes that pinch like that."

Shoe clerk: "I'm sorry, madam; but you've tried on all our different styles. These shoes are the ones you were wearing when you came in."

HELP! HELP!

Me Hercule!" the Romans cried
On finding strength unduly tried.
Me Hercule! The easy way
Is what all want to use to-day.

—DON C. SERR.

From the Allston "Recorder:—

Prof. (calling roll): "Smith."

Smith: "I'm not here to-day, professor. Don't you remember? I'm working up at your house to-day."

Prof. (absently): "Quite so. Spade the garden and mow the lawn before you leave. I shall expect it done when I get home."

"Ah, spring is heah at last!" exclaimed Mr. Sorghum Planter, of northern Virginia, to his wife one morning. "I heard th' honk o' th' nawth-bound flivvehs all night long."

An official of the Rockefeller Institute states that among the many letters of denunciation which that institution receives, one came from a man in Arkansas who took the view that all this modern education is dangerous, and that the new-fangled practice of grounding preachers in Latin and Greek is especially pernicious. They ought to be taught English, he said, adding in conclusion: "If English was good enough for Jesus, it's good enough for me."

"Is she intellectual?" he was asked.

"No, I find her very intelligent," he replied.

From "Everybody's Magazine:—

"Mark Twain hated a gloomy man," said a New York editor. "Once, at a banquet, a very gloomy man sat opposite him. This man wouldn't smile at the most amusing jokes recounted. 'What's the matter with you?' cried Mark Twain. 'The stories are all good. Why don't you laugh?' 'Ah, sir,' said the gloomy man, with a sigh, 'how can I laugh when I remember that every time I breathe a soul passes into the Great Beyond?' 'Good gracious!' said the humorist. 'Did you ever try cloves?'"

The output of perfumes and toilet preparations in this country has multiplied six times in the last ten years, according to a recent report of the American Chemical Society. The annual production of creams and rouges totals $34,178,000; of perfumes and toilet waters, $20,423,000; and of talcum and other toilet powders, $21,423,000.

"Nothing works out right," says the Birmingham "News." "In a town where you can park as long as you want to there is no reason why you should want to."

From the Sydney "Bulletin:—

Orator: "And what do we do? We pursue the shadow, the bubble bursts, and leaves but sackcloth and ashes in our empty hands."

A cable from London, England, to the New York "World," reads:—

"The Commons debate on the provision of bathrooms in state-subsidized houses has drawn the Manchester 'Guardian's' attention to the modernity of the bathroom even in the homes of the wealthy. Few seem to realize, however, how comparatively recent is not merely the daily tub but the daily practice of quite minor ablutions. In a manual on good manners by Jean Baptiste de la Salle, published in 1713 and reprinted and translated many times during the following century, the reader was advised 'for the sake of cleanliness it is well to rub the face every morning with a white towel, in order to remove the dirt. It is not advisable to wash with water, for this exposes the face to the chills of winter and the heats of summer.'"

From the "Wall Street Journal:—

A woman who was living in a hotel in San Francisco hired a Chinese boy.

She said, "What's your name?"

"Fu You Tsin Mei," said he.

"Your name is too long. I'll call you John."

"What's your name?" said he.

"Mrs. Elmer Edward McDonald."

"Your name too long. I call you Char-He."

The Gladstone Family Group

THE OUTLOOK for February 23 contained, on page 239, a picture of the Gladstone family, together with an invitation to Outlook readers to identify any of the members of the group. The response was seven letters offering identifications.

In the back row of The Outlook picture were, left to right, Rev. Stephen Gladstone, the second son of the Premier; Mrs. Stephen Gladstone; Mrs. Harry Drew (Mary Gladstone), the second daughter of the Premier; Rev. Harry Drew; Herbert Gladstone, the fourth son of the Premier, the present "Lord Gladstone;" and Miss Helen Gladstone, the Premier's eldest daughter. Gladstone and Mrs. Gladstone were in the center of the group, with Stephen Deiniol Gladstone on the Premier's knee. The girl and boy sitting at the feet of Mrs. Gladstone were Dorothy Drew and William G. Gladstone, the son of the Gladstones' eldest son. The other children of the group remained unidentified, except that one reader thinks the boy at the extreme left of the picture was William E. Gladstone, who fell in the World War.

"By all means, own The World Book"

NATHANIEL BUTLER, Dean, University of Chicago, says: "The World Book is the best and most practical family encyclopedia of which I have any knowledge. For the man of affairs, and for a household with boys and girls growing up, I do not know of a set of books I should recommend in its stead."

Charles McKenny, President, State Normal College, Ypsilanti, Michigan: "The World Book is one of the best reference books for both young and old that could be put in any home."

E. George Payne, Professor of Education, New York University: "So far as my experience goes The World Book is the most valuable reference work on the market for the school library, for the teacher and for the pupil of the elementary and secondary schools."

Here in ten convenient, beautifully bound volumes is all vital world-knowledge, of all yesterday and today, made simple, entertaining, rich with story and picture, rich with human interest and a broad world viewpoint . . . timely and down to date. The World Book is the only reference work of its kind that has the unqualified approval of the highest educational authorities. Compiled a few years ago—it is already in almost every school library of any size in the United States . . . from one to 100 sets in practically every city library. Approved by State Boards of Education . . . judged "best of its type" by the American Library Association, America's supreme court on books.

Compare any World Book article with a similar article in any general reference work or encyclopedia. You find it more animated, easily understood, more to the point—giving you a survey of a subject in few minutes. Yet it invites browsing—invites looking up related subjects listed at the end of each article. It is the children's own reference book. The encyclopedia for your own general culture.

Your city librarian, the superintendent of your schools, the teacher of your boy or girl, know The World Book, use it. The World Book is sold exclusively through such professional men and women. The coupon brings complete information.
