DIRECTIONS

To solve this puzzle you must guess twenty-six words, the definitions of which are given in the column headed DEFINITIONS. The letters in each word to be guessed are numbered. These numbers appear under the dashes in the column headed WORDS. There is a dash for each letter in the required word. The key letters in the squares are for convenience, indicating to which word in the definitions each letter in the diagram belongs. When you have guessed a word, fill it in on the dashes; then write each letter in the correspondingly numbered square on the puzzle diagram. When the squares are all filled in you will find (by reading from left to right) a quotation from a famous author. Reading up and down the letters mean nothing. The black squares indicate ends of words; therefore words do not necessarily end at the right side of the diagram.

When the column headed WORDS is filled in, the initial letters spell the name of the author and the title of the piece from which the quotation has been taken. Authority for spelling and definitions is Webster's New International Dictionary (1938 edition).

The solution of last week's Double Crostic will be found on page 6 of this issue.

An elephant hunter in Tanganyika, Africa, said to

NEGLEY FARSON

"Nobody knows what happens to us down here — behind God's back!"

Negley Farson went to Africa before war's outbreak because he foresaw how much of the fate of Europe might depend upon events in that vast continent. He made it his business to find out about the people of Africa, from the leading political figures to the elusive bushmen, from Governors and leading German Fuehrers in every Mandate to tobacco planters, sportsmen, and ordinary citizens. He sought every kind of pertinent information, piecing it together with the experience of a born reporter and brilliant writer.

No one of equal range of experience has ever studied Africa so intimately; no one has made every aspect of real life in Africa so vivid as Farson does here.

Whittling Boy

by Roger Burlingame

"A Massachusetts farm boy who did indeed invent the cotton gin but whose greater contribution to American development was the idea of using interchangeable parts in manufactured products, which made mass production possible. An excellent story." Illustrated, $3.00

SAROYAN

"... at his best — and that is very good indeed. Like Tom Sawyer and Penrod, and perhaps Clarence Day's family, it has a place in the story of America."

—St. Louis Globe Democrat

"Easily Saroyan's most significant book." —Sterling North, Chicago Daily News

"A family portrait of significance in American social history

...Through these pages march and bluster, saunter and simmer, dozens of characters of our vain-glorious past. One of the assets of the book is the honest treatment of the members of the family now alive. These are done in a style familiar to readers of profiles in The New Yorker, telling, effective and to the point... excellently documented."—N. Y. Times Book Review.
