member on the staff of any store into an art that commands top executive salaries by the creators of show windows for specialty shops and department stores.

Mr. Gaba has a predilection for displays that feature mannequins, and in his treatment of windows he, of course, accentuates fashion. However, in his book he does not neglect the other phases of what in the light of modern merchandising methods has become nothing short of a profession.

Mr. Gaba, never didactic, develops his theory of window display in a text that is as fascinating as it is helpful. It were to be wished that the illustrations did as much. Though the examples chosen are revealing and to the point, not so much, alas, can be said of their reproduction. In a beautifully designed book it is to be regretted that more attention has not been paid to this. This, however, is my only adverse criticism.

The author's advice to display men is pithy and pungent in an almost playful way. His chapter on the "because" of successful windows for different merchandise is an excellent study course for would-be display men. His answers to questions of display of the most varied merchandise are extremely valuable. But even for those who do not intend to make a career out of display it is a fascinating insight into a world filled with glamour and glitter and a glimpse into the never-never land of a display man's dream,-withal practical and pointing a way for people with an artistic sense, imagination, and enthusiasm.

-Alfred A. van Duym.

the dashes in the column beaded WORDS. There is a dash for each letter is the required word. The key letters in the squares are jo conveni-ence, indicating to which word in the definitions each letter in the dia-gram belongs. When you have guessed a word, fill it in on the dathes; them write each letter in the correspondingly num-bered square of the puz-le diagram. When the squares are all filled in you will find (by read-ing from left to right) a quotation from a famous anthor. Read up and down the letters mean not hing. The black squares indicate ends of words; words do not necessarily end at the right side of the diagram. When the column head-ed WORDS is filled in. When the column bead-ed WORDS is filled in. When the quota-tion has been taken. Au-thorist for spelling and definitions is Webster's New International Dic-tionary (second edition).
