The Newcomers

FOR magazines, this is a time of grueling competition—primarily for advertising but also for subscribers and authors. Any reader, even one with a short memory, can tick off the names of at least some of the casualties in the struggle. But hope springs eternal and so do new magazines. Two recent cases in point:

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW (75¢ a copy, $3 a year): Founded originally in 1815 as a New England magazine, the North American Review expanded its scope until its death in 1940, publishing along the way the work of such men as Daniel Webster, Walt Whitman, Mark Twain, and Ulysses S. Grant. Now, a generation after it closed shop, the quarterly has been revived with impressive enthusiasm if not much focus. In an explanatory note the editors—who make their headquarters in Mount Vernon, Iowa—say: “We want to be an arena for world issues. We want to print good writing and good thinking and to present it to the widest possible audience.” But that goal in itself is hardly enough to distinguish the North American Review from any number of other magazines on the newsstands. Nor, sadly, is the contents of the first issue.

The writers in themselves are impressive enough—Frank Luther Mott, Roswell Garst, Julian Huxley, Robert Penn Warren, Peter Viereck, and Salvador de Madariaga, among others. But much of Volume I, Number 1 seems to consist of articles in search of a point of view. Mott, as perceptive a historian of American journalism as the country has seen, writes on the proliferation of know business and argues, in some way that I confess eludes me, that it’s all a bad, bad thing. Garst, the Iowa farmer who gave Mr. Khrushchev a few lessons in corn growing when the Premier visited his farm in 1959, is represented by two articles, one based on a visit to the Soviet Union in 1955 and the other a blueprint for increasing crop yields. And so it goes, or much of it anyhow. It is all worthy enough, I suppose, but it somehow doesn’t engage the reader very deeply.

I have an unmistakable feeling, in fact, that the editors themselves are badly underestimating the audience they are evidently seeking. We find, for example, reviews of J. D. Salinger’s Raise High the Roof Beam, Carpenters and Seymour—An Introduction and John A. T. Robinson’s Honest to God—both of which were published not just weeks but months ago. And nothing mystifies me more than Salvador de Madariaga’s article “Nations and Moral Law.” The very same article appeared in Saturday Review in November 1960.

VENTURE ($11.50 per year to American Express credit card holders, $17.50 to others): Travel, as nearly everybody knows by this time, is big business, and this new magazine clearly hopes to get in on the booty. Furthermore, it may well have the know-how to do it. A hefty and healthy-looking 202 pages bound in hardcover like American Heritage and peppered, unlike American Heritage, with full-color ads, it ranges the world in picture and text with all the seasoned aplomb of a traveler who knows just where he’s going. Rarely, in fact, has a new magazine started out with such an assured and easy stride.

Venture is published bimonthly by Cowles, is edited by Curtiss Anderson, a former editor of Ladies’ Home Journal, and, because it is being offered at a special rate to American Express card holders (every last one of whom gets an introductory copy free), should presumably be able to fatten up its subscription list in short order. The first issue offers articles on Greece, Tokyo, New York, Iowa, North Carolina, restaurants, cartography, the Shakespeare year, gambling in Europe, jewelry buying in the Orient, and enough other far-flung material to make the most incorrigible homebody rush off to his travel agent. It’s a glittery and often gladsome adventure and should, because everybody seems to be on the move these days, go places, too.

Swinging Out: Raymond Swing, foreign correspondent, newscaster, and iconoclast, was noted in his heyday for a lofty independence that was the envy of his rivals and the despair of his opponents. And with good reason. In 1939, in his first sponsored broadcast, he was able to begin by saying: “My sponsor is permitting me to give my talks . . . without any censorship whatever of my script.” And a year later, on the day the Nazis invaded Holland, Belgium, and Luxembourg, he refused to make his broadcast unless the radio station would promise to eliminate the usual middle commercial. These victories and the story of his encounters with FDR, Einstein, and other major figures of the day are recounted in “Good Evening!” (Harcourt, Brace & World, $5.95), a “professional memoir” that is a deft mixture of anecdote, nostalgia, and good sense. At his best, Swing can be as memorably evocative as a snatch of song out of some remote yesterday. —JAMES F. FIXX.

“Think of it, Professor—the only cigarette on the market guaranteed to stop tooth decay!”

Santa Monica, Mr. Weaver pointed out the technical sophistication of his system. Although his Program Selector will have only three channels, a subscriber could receive specialized programs outside the main traffic streams, however mass-oriented these were. A regular program brochure, he pointed out, will be furnished to subscribers. In it they can be apprised of programs that will be broadcast far from prime time, perhaps after midnight.

Subscribers can set their receivers to tune in these programs automatically and record them. A viewer could then play back such a recorded program at his own convenience. Programs could also be provided to subscribers in film cartridges sent through the mail upon request. Pat Weaver concedes, however, that special hardware will be required for such subtle communication between STV headquarters and individual subscribers.

Recording devices and full-color, luminescent wall-screens, he predicts, will change living room designs and have a billion-dollar impact on the electronics industry. Nor is this the ultimate. STV in the home is capable of other variations. Weaver foresees subscribers using the system as a "tele-shopping" mechanism. Distribution centers for consumer goods can be tied in to individual receivers so that families can see what is available and transmit orders.

All this, to be sure, is in the distance. In the immediate foreground is the necessity to build a large base of support for STV. Viewers who help create it may not find their special tastes instantly satisfied, but they may have the satisfaction of knowing that technologically that goal is possible—and promised. —ROBERT LEWIS SHAYON.

DIRECTIONS

To solve this puzzle you must guess twenty-odd WORDS, the definitions of which are given in the column headed DEFINITIONS. Alongside each definition, there is a row of dashes—one for each letter in the required word. When you have guessed a word, write it on the dashes, and also write each letter in the correspondingly numbered square of the puzzle diagram. . . . When the squares are all filled in, you will find that you have completed a quotation from some published work. If read up and down, the letters in the diagram have no meaning. . . . Black squares indicate ends of words; if there is no black square at the right side of the diagram, the word carries over to the next line. When all the WORDS are filled in, their initial letters spell the name of the author and the title of the piece from which the quotation has been taken. Of great help to the solver are this acrostic feature and the relative shapes of words in the diagram as they develop. Authority for spellings and definitions is Webster's New International Dictionary, Second and Third Editions.
